FROM THURSDAY'S DAILY. THE STEAMBOAT COLLISION.

Capt. Kirk of the Dixie Gives His Version of It.

Capt. Kirk, in charge of the Dixie, came to The Statesman office yesterday to give his side of the collision with the Ben Hur last Tuesday night. He said he was making for home in time to land for the 9 o'clock car from the dam. When he got past Walsh's point he saw the Ben Hur backing across from her warf and then saw her straighten out to run up the lake. He was running down close to the north bank, expecting the Bea Hur as usual to keep out towards the middle of the stream. He blew two blasts from his whistle, but the Ben Hur did not answer. He kept on in close to the north bank, but with the tower light in his eyes bank, but with the tower light in his eyes and the Ben Hur lights also blinding him he did not see how close he was to the shore until very close to the Ben Hur. He saw he could not get in between the Ben Hur and the shore, and then it was too late to turn across and pass the Ben Hur and get out into the stream. All he could do was to turn the Dixie and the barge along side of her, so that the Ben Hur would hit the barge square in front. This was the safest plan, and this he adopted. was the safest plan, and this he adopted, the bow of the Ben Hur hitting the front the bow of the Ben Hur hitting the front of the barge not six inches from dead center. The force of the blow swung the barge and Dixie around. The ropes were all broken that bound them together, but the force of the blow knocked the barge further from the Ben Hur than it did the Dixie. The Dixie barely missed the wheel of the Ben Hur as it went up stream between the Dixie and the barge and the north bank. 4 He backed the Dixie up stream and his son got in a boat and carried a line over to the barge and drawing the Dixie alongside he landed his passengers safely. Capt. Kirk is very auxious, he says, for a thorough investigation and let the blame fall where it will on the parties at fault for the accident.

FROM FRIDAY'S DAILY. THE STATE DEPARTMENTS.

FROM SATURDAY'S DAILY.

The County Commissioners. The county commissioners are still grinding away as a board of equalization, and they will be in session some time.

Emancipation Day.

This is Emancipation day, and the col-ored people will celebrate it in great style. From some cause there are two factions, and each will celebrate, one faction at Go-valle, and the other at Wheeler's grove. Both will have street parades, music and County Court. Mr. W. H. Firebaugh filed suit yester-day in the county court against August Luedecke on a note for $465. The court will meet the first Monday in next month.

Mrs. M. A. C. Wilson.

Mrs. M. A. C. Wilson, an aged veteran of the republic of Texas, died on the 17th instant, at her residence in this city. She was the widow of Col. John F. Wilson, one of the leading spirits of the Mier expedition, who died in 1861. She has taken an active interest in all that pertains to Texas from its early history down to the present time. Her remains will be taken from Austin, to Lexington, Va., the place of her nativity, in obedience to a requireof her nativity, in obedience to a require-ment of her will.

Will Live Here.

Capt. M. R. Kenedy of Taylor yester-day purchased the magnificent and costly residence formerly belonging to Mr. Frank Hamilton and will make Austin his future home. Capt, Kenedy is one of Williamson county's wealthiest citi zens, having large interest in lands and zens, having large interest in lands and stock. It is quite an accession to Aus-tin to attract and bring among us the leading men of our sister counties, and it speaks well for Austin with her many advantages.

WANT PROTECTION.

The San Saba County Witnesses Ask

the State's Protection. The governor was visited yesterday morning by quite a large delegation of San Saba county citizens, witnesses in the Trowbridge and Ford murder trials, which were moved from that county to Austin on a change of venue. They stated to the governor that they believed their lives were in danger and came to him for pro-tection. The governor made them a short talk, assuring them of his willingness to go to the extent of his authority in enforce ing the law, and promising to keep a de tachment of rangers in San Saba county as long as they were desired by the citi-zens there. The witnesses said this was all they could ask and left seemingly well satisfied with their visit.

A RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

A Boy Run Over and Killed Last Afternoon Near This City.

Yesterday afternoon an incoming frieght Yesterday afternoon an incoming frieght train on the International and Great Northern ran over and seriously injured near Hooper, a young boy about 18 years of age, who was stealing a ride. His name was Nathan Brooks, and he was from Palestine. At the time of the accident, which happened near Hooper, he was stealing a ride on the train, riding underneath the car, on the rods. He lost his footing in some way and fell under the wheels. The wheels passed over both his legs, cutting them off a short distance belegs, cutting them off a short distance be low the trunk of his body. At the time of the accident the train was coming down hill and could not stop until it had gone a considerable distance. Then it was impossible for them to back up, so they came on to the city and a switch engine and a box car were immediately sent out from here to get the boy. Dr. Granberry, the company surgeon, went out on the train and brought the boy to this city. of the accident the train was coming down He gave him all assisance possible to al-leviate his pain, but it was of little avail and the boy died soon after he reached this city, and in fact, before he could be taken out of the cars. The remains were taken out of the cars. The remains were taken to the undertaker's, awaiting orders for its burial.

FROM MONDAY'S DAILY.

Attached Witnesses. Sheriff White will leave today for Bastrop with a batch of attached witnesses. Deputy Joe Corwin fastened on to them yesterday a few miles east of the city.

Another Trial. It looks now as if there will have to be another expensive trial of the San Saba murder cases. Should such be the case, it is certain the witness list will be materially cut down.

Juries Still Out. The juries in the Matt. Ford and George Trowbridge murder cases were still out yesterday wrestling with the evidence. From all signs they have about wrestled themselves out and will never agree. It is possible the Trowbridge jury will be discharged today.

Work at the New Pumping Station. Work out at the new pumping station is moving along, but it will be at least two months before the big pump will be moved to its new place of operation. The engin-eer has suggested the propriety of digging another filtering trench so as to insure an abundance of water in case one of the trenches should have to be cleaned out.

The District Courts.

The district courts will meet this morn ing at 10 o'clock, and Judge Brooks will call the motion docket. It will be a per-emptory call, and lawyers should be on In Judge Morris' court non-jury civil cases will be taken up, and lawyers having such should make a note of it. New Undertaker's Wagon.

In addition to the magnificent funeral car described in yesterday's Statesman Mr. Monroe Miller has added a new and ele-gant undertaker's wagon. It has French plate glass sides and is a handsome vehicle. To his livery outfit, the largest and most complete in the state, he has recently add-ed several new and costly carriages. A Rich Find.

He stopped his borse, and, getting out, he picked up the book, and opening it he found two letters and a $10 bill. He then drove on. He was seen to do this, but his name could not be learned. The letters may lead to the return of the pocketbook to its owner.

Wanted in Elgin.

Deputy Joe Corwin yesterday arrested a Mexican wanted in Elgin on a charge of Mexican wanted in Elgin on a charge of beating his wife. He was arrested there and put in the calaboose, from which he escaped last Tuesday. Officers were notified here, and yesterday morning they got on his trail here in town, but he gave them the slip. Subsequently Deputy Corwin, while down near Hornby's Bend after attached witnesses, ran across him. He will be held for the Elgin officers.

FROM TUESDAY'S DAILY. THE GLORIES OF WATTERS.

An Ideal Place for Romancers and Every observing traveler over the Austin and Northwestern Railway has been struck with the variety and beauty of the adjoining landscape, the solid and well kept roadbed and the substantial and picturesque depots at stopping points, which prove that the road is under the management of a man of fine taste and good judgment. One of the most noticeable stations is at Watters, fourteen miles by rail and ten by road, from Austin, on the headwaters of Walnut creek. Watters is a pretty little village which threatens by its popularity as a holiday resort to soon develop into a town if not a city.

Alderman Taylor favored the report, saying that the female prisoners could be made to crack rock in the yard adjacent to the jail. Alderman Linn opposed the working of women in any such a management approval.

The following enactments by the special session of the Twenty-fifth legislature became laws yesterday with the governor's approval.

House bill No. 21, fixing the time for holding court in the Thirty-eighth judicial district.

House bill No. 30, fixing the venue and regulating proceedings in prosecution for murder by mob violence; define and punish murder by mob violence; provide for the suspension and removal of sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables, chiefs of police, city marshals and other officers who permit it; and fix the venue and regulations. Pienickers. to soon develop into a town if not a city. Not only is the village itself interesting. but it is surrounded by a country so varied in character and favored by nature as is rarely met with in Texas. Be-fore the advent of the railroad the village was known as Summerville, after one of the old settlers, but the railway builders gave it is present name, as one of the natives explained, because the waters of the two branches of Walnut creek met there, but of this deponent is not in a position to speak. It has always been a favorite camping place for the lovers of outdoor religious meetings, and under the spreading branches of the giant pecans that now shade the new bandstand and dancing platform, many dandstand and dancing platform, many a stiners has been shaken up and stendied down to a new order of life. There is nothing narrow or intolerant about Watters and its community. The festive pleasure seeker and the devout worshipper are alike welcomed and made to feel at home. This was noticeable twice during a recent week when at home. This was noticeable twice dur-ing a recent week, when a protracted meeting was in full swing at the camp ground about 100 yards east of Watters, while the colored folks enjoyed themselves while the colored folks enjoyed themselves in Pecan park, 100 yards west, without any conflict of interests or enjoyment. We are a cosmopolitan people.

Visitors to Watters can always join heartily in singing, "I have been there and still would go," as it supplies unexpected sensations and revelations to the "cribbed, cabined and confined" denizens of the city and the resident." zens of the city and the residents of less God-favored sections of the country. A brief description of the more inter-esting scenes near Watters is now in order. The first place of interest to the heliday maker. esting scenes near Watters is now in order. The first place of interest to the holiday maker is Pecan park, which adjoins the depot and covers about ten acres. It looks as if specially designed by nature for picnic purposes, being studded with noble pecan trees, many of which would be in full bearing when Columbus said to the king of Spain: "I will go and discover America." Under the umbrageous limbs of one of these patriarchs, Capt. Leitnaker has srected a neat, substantial and commodious band stand and platform, which will be found equally well adapted for social, political and religious festivals. Benches and tables are supplied free, pro bono publico. Within the park is a spring of neverfailing water of the purest brand. If Watters had nothing beyond the park as an attraction for pleasure seekers, it would have a solid and sufficient excuse for inviting strangers; but, with an aggregation of matural beauties and scenes made famous (locally) in pre-state and ante-bellum times, she should become the Mecca of pleasure seeking pilgrims.

Within a mile of the park can be found "bits" of scenery and historical spots that may some day inspire a latter-day Cooper and Sir Walter Scott. Old settlers have thrilling tales to tell of adventures and combats with Indians who had their head-quarters at a spring, which forms the head of Walnut creek at Duval, and they point out spots where settlers were scalped and red men dispatched to the happy hunting ground. Innumerable mounds adorn or disfigure the landscape, below which the warriors' mortal remains, to-and other personal belongings, still lie.

Leaving Watters and following the course of Wainut creek in a westerly direction, the traveler with an eye for the beautiful and a slightly impressionable imagination, will find scenes that will serve as a good substitute for the fabled beauties of more fashionable resorts in other parts of the world. The views are inspiring and suggestive rather than overawing. Here you get hints of mighty inspiring and suggestive rather than overawing. Here you get hints of mighty canyons and dizzy peaks, as you look upon the towering linchen-covered bluffs that rise above the dark and gloomy caves. Over one of these bluffs you will be told that a Comanche chief, hard-pressed by a party of settlers whose homes had been raided, leapt for life, and falling about 150 feet, found a hard rock bottom and death. Close by the spot is a cavern known as the "Robbers' cave," which is believed to be connected with the Sam Bass cave at McNeil, three miles distant. Its extent and interior arrangements still remain a mystery in spite of distant. Its extent and interior arrangements still remain a mystery in spite of the enterprise of many adventurous spirits who have Sinbad tales to tell of what they saw, or imagined they saw, in the course of their explorations. A little further on, in the bottom of the creek, is a large boulder, surrounded by dry sand and pebbly shingle, except in times of flood, known as the "popping rock," as tradition says that one of our old governors there "popped the question" to his loved one, while they sat there enjoying the beauties of nature and each others' society. As the nonzer was perfectly satsociety. As the popper was perfectly sat-isfied with the reply, many lovesick swains have, by one subterfuge and an-other, lured their loved ones to the same spot, and the result has never been known to be unfavorable. In fact, a well known geologist has declared that the popping rock of Walnut is almost identical in character with the Blarney stone of Killarney.

A few yards further west the course of the creek is barred with an almost perpendicular wall of rock, which in flood perpendicular wall of rock, which in flood times forms a miniature Niagara, and causes an atmospheric disturbance that can be heard at a great distance. When the creek is in flood many people come to see the falls of Walnut, and seeing them, feel repaid.

These are but a few of the interesting places in the district, but there is practically no limit to them. Not only will those tired with the confinement of the city enjoy the freedom of country life, but the student, the artist, the naturalist and the scientist will each find gratification and reward for a day's outing in this favored district. It is the fashion of the day for people to travel great distances, at great cost and inconvenience, to "do" scenes rendered famous in song and story, while they remain utterly oblivious of greater natural treasures close at home.

State Departments.

The state treasury has not paid out any money since the last of February, pending the passage of the general appropriation bill. That bill went into effect last Friday, and on Saturday the treasury paid out in the neighborhood of $70,000. Yesterday it was busy paying additional warrants, and it is thought that if the present ratio of disbursement is maintained until the first of the month that there will have been something like $500,000 paid out. By the middle of July the disbursements will have exceeded $750,000. In addition to this regular disbursement which will come about ceeded $750,000. In addition to this reg-ular disbursement which will come about in the regular operations of the state gov-ernment, the additional appropriations made for the improvement of the various state institutions will also be drawn out within the next two months, insamuch as work on them will begin as soon as pos-sible. From this it would look as though the wave of prosperity might strike Texas, for a while at least. The fact that nearly a quarter of a million dol-lars will be turned loose within the next few weeks is at least indicative of a loosening of money matters temporarily, if not for all time.

The state printing board was in session yesterday morning and decided that they would ask for new bids for the printing of the Supreme Court Reports that are now out of print.

sembled the man without a job and with slight possibility of getting one any time soon. Several of the house members were still knocking around to see as to whether the country had been entirely saved, and over in the senate end one or two patriots were holding forth to see that everything was being properly placed away. The halls still resounded at intervals with "the gentleman from such and such a county" and "I rise to a point of order." These sounds were only in the air, however, and one or two of the press gang, who absent-mindedly wandered into the hall and heard the echoes of the past session almost had a fit at the idea that it was a stern reality and not a mere echo. The few remaining members left last night for their respective homes, and thus it is that the embled the man without a job and with respective homes, and thus it is that the end has come to all that is of the Twenty-fifth legislature.

Resolution of Thanks. The newspaper correspondents who have been here during the legislature yesterday morning, at a business meeting, adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, For the past six months we have been in constant business relations with O. D. Parker, manager of the Western Union Telegraph company in this city; and Whereas, The service has been first-class in every respect and our relations most pleasant and satisfactory with the Western Union management; therefore,

Western Union management; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby individually and collectively tender our hearty thanks to Manager Parker and his day and night force, not alone for the superb service, but for the uniform courtesies and kindnesses extended.

A Quiet Marriage.

On Sunday, at noon, when Dr. J. A. French returned home from church, he French returned home from church, he found in waiting in a hack a young gentleman and lady who desired to be married. A few words of inquiry elicited the fact that they were Mr. Albert F. Ganss and Miss Josephine Morrison of San Antonio, who by pre-arrangement came to Austin to have the nuptial knot fied. The minister soon said the words which made them one in the presence of several witnesses and they took the afternoon train for home.
